SCORE A HOLE IN ONE WITH LOCAL BUSINESS NETWORKING

McLeod Country Golf Club is hosting its first networking day, giving Brisbane business owners and managers who are tired of the same stiff networking functions the opportunity to connect with one another in a fun social setting.

On Friday 5 March, and for only $15 per person, participants receive a group clinic from 4.30pm, followed by networking, drinks and nibbles in the club house.

According to Di Paez, President of McLeod Country Golf Club, business people do not have to be experienced golfers to participate.

"It's a fun, relaxed introductory clinic to the game of golf, giving participants a unique opportunity to network and meet other like-minded business people with whom to connect," she said.

Ms Paez said that golf is a very social activity, rather than a competitive one, and therefore provides a range of networking opportunities in a non-threatening environment.

"You often see business people playing a round of golf with clients or associates, and there is a reason for that – the game and the golf course tends to relax people and allows them to tackle difficult topics in a more social environment," she said.

According to Ms Paez, a golf course also provides a unique venue for business networking groups.

"We find that it's easier to lose your inhibitions on a golf course and people can interact and network more freely than in your typical corporate meeting room or venue."

Ms Paez reminded attendees that smart casual attire was appropriate, rather than heels and skirts, due to the clinic being held on the green.

"All equipment is provided, so the only thing participants will be required to bring is a handful of business cards," she said.

McLeod Country Golf Club has recently celebrated its 40th anniversary, and remains the first and only golf club fully administered by women in Australia for the enjoyment of all its players.

Today women, men and children make up the 1000-plus membership, enjoying the strong camaraderie and fellowship as well as a challenging game of golf on the 18-hole course.

Membership is open year round.
